Mr. Editor:—Can you inform me whether all the brands of kerosene oil that come into this market are tested according to law? If so, does that test prove whether the oil will give a good light or not? To judge from the smoky, yellow, glimmering character of some I have tried, I should say that the oil was "safe" enough, as safe and about as good for illuminating purpose as tallow.

Bewitched Planters.

Mr. Editor:—The action of the Planters' Labor and Supply Company, in requesting the Premier to remove the present restriction which prevents the flooding of the country with Chinese coolies seems as if they were completely bewitched by a class of labor which is both unprofitable and undesirable.

The Premier, in his very able reply, has shown to the planters that he understands their wants, and the nature of the labor which they petition far much be tier that they do themselves; and further, he shows that he has respect for the wishes of the friendly Powers—and the most sensible act of the session was when Mr. W. O. Smith acknowledged that the Premier had done right in refusing the request, and consequently they had done wrong in proposing it.

To-day there are hundreds of idle Chinese, supported by a combination of their countrymen, so as to keep them out of the labor market, and the introduction of 2000 additional coolies would not benefit the planters one iota, as they might know by past experience.

On one or two of the plantations on the island of Kauai, the Chinese laborers have got a "fine thing" introduced for themselves. About say twenty or twenty-four laborers will form themselves into a club, select one of their number who has a good address as their "boss," and forthwith he "tackles" the manager, representing that he can "raise" a gang of first-class laborers to work by the day, and with "tacky" and fine promises, this "boss" gets splendid terms for his men—good wages, good quarters, firewood, &c. And the writer is informed by those who know, that those laborers do not do an honest day's work in three days; and, unless during brief visits of the manager, they appear more like persons amusing themselves than working for wages.

Then again, in the case of "shipped" Chinese laborers, it is only the strong arm of the law which saves the planters being "robbed" and "fooled" every day in the year; and, after all is done, they would request the Government to allow an influx of such a class of laborers, and thus break faith with a country which has granted us a favor which it has denied to others; and also to act against the wishes of friendly Powers who are decidedly opposed to the Kingdom being over-run by Chinese coolies.

Yours, &c.,

Ireland's Latest Triumph.

Of the Viceroy's of India, the first, Lord Canning, was English; the second, Lord Elgin, Scotch; the third, Lord Lawrence, Irish; the fourth, Lord Mayo, Irish also. The fifth, sixth, and seventh—Lords Northbrook, Lytton, and Ripon—were English; but now the appointment of the Earl of Dufferin re-established an Irishman on the vice-regal throne. Lord Dufferin made a splendid exit from Constantinople. Just before he left a deputation of the British colony presented an address at Therapia, congratulating him on his appointment as Viceroy, and expressing sincere regret at his departure. The general attendance at Therapia to say good-by was exceptionally large, and included all the Ambassadors and Ministers.

A Non-Com.

"George," she inquired, as she finished the last plate of cream, "what does 'non-com.' mean?"

George paused in his task of mentally calculating the cost of the entertainment so far, and said, "non-com." is an abbreviation of the Latin phrase non compos mentis, which means "foolish," "silly," "off his base," "you know."

"Oh! that's it, is it?" she murmured as she drew the plate of cake towards her, "was that what Henry meant when he said that Johnnie Perknose was 'a little non-com.' in the Rifles now?"

George smiled, and answered, "No, I don't think it was. I think that Harry meant that Perky was lately made a non-commissioned officer in the Rifles."

Gen. John B. Murray.

The veteran campaigner, Gen. John B. Murray, who during the rebellion in the United States commanded the 148th N.Y.S. Vol. Infantry, died suddenly on the 7th of October last at Seneca Falls, N.Y.

General Murray did gallant service during the war, and there are those now in Honolulu who were his comrades, and who served under him who will regret his sudden demise. The Ontario Country Times in noticing his death says, "He died as he would have wished, with his old companions in arms about him." Peace to his ashes.

Patriotic Joe.

Election day in Honolulu was a truly gala day. Too much praise cannot be awarded to Mr. Wiseman for the open-hearted manner in which he threw open his spacious office "pro bono publico." He worked indefatigably, and though he wore a Blaine hat, and presumably cast a vote for the Republican candidate, he treated the Cleveland men with respect and courtesy. Mr. Wiseman deserves the thanks of this community, as also do his coadjutors. If Mr. Blaine should be returned, Mr. Wiseman ought not to be forgotten.
